

We tend to get overly defensive.

We are the eyes that watch the backs of our country's most elite watch dogs. We detect the most imperceptible of threats and recognize gaps in security where no one else can. Our perspective of security relies on state-of-the-art video surveillance, access control and intrusion detection.

But it also relies on the expertise and dedication of our employees. Just like our security systems, our service must be steadfast and never quit. We don't walk away until the job is done, and done right. It's not enough to build strong security systems. It's just as important to build stronger connections with the people who depend on us. Because so much depends on them.
